VIRGINIA GENERAL ASSEMBLY

The Basics:

- Founded as the House of Burgesses in 1619 and named General Assembly in 1776
- Bicameral Legislature: Split between State Senate (Upper Chamber) and House of Delegates (Lower Chamber)
- Annual legislative session to pass legislation on important topics and pass a state-wide budget

Legislative Session

- Even-numbered years: 60-day session
- Odd-numbered years: 30-day session, traditionally extended to 45 days.
- Sessions can be extended through a two-thirds vote of both chambers.
- A special session of the General Assembly can be convened by the Governor "when, in his opinion, the interest of the Commonwealth may require and shall convene a special session upon the application of two-thirds of the members elected to each house" (Article IV, Section 6, Virginia Constitution).

The (Simplified) Process to Pass a Bill

- Once bills are introduced in either chamber, they are referred to a committee. The Clerk of the Senate refers Senate bills and the Speaker of the House refers House bills.
- Bills must then pass through their referred committee before being read to the House or Senate floor for a vote.
- If passed by one chamber, it then moves to the other chamber to repeat the same process and is voted on by that chamber.
- Any revisions to the originally passed bill must be returned to the original chamber for another vote.
- The bill then goes to the Governor's desk to be signed or vetoed.
- In the event of a veto, the House and Senate can override with two-thirds votes to pass the law.
